Concert Festival Auditions at the Jericho Public Library

On February 5th, 2011 the theatre at the Jericho Public Library opened its doors for young musicians from Long Island, Manhattan, New Jersey and Connecticut.

They all came to participate in the Concert Festivals' 2011 auditions. Young musicians, age 5-25 who study classical music on many instruments and voice, came to Jericho Public Library to showcase their talents. Some of the youngsters even played two instruments.

"We are very happy to hear so many talented young people and see their love for classical music" stated Concert Festival Director Galina Khutoryansky. The Jury Panel consisting of internationally renowned musicians had a difficult time selecting who was to perform at Carnegie Hall, Merkin Hall, Baruch Performing Arts Center and at Lincoln Center.

There were more participants than last year and the level of performance was high. Artistic Directors Yelena and Vladimir Polezhayev said "Some of the kids were amazing".
